firmly as a consciousness that he bore a name that must not die ingloriously seemed to fill his every vein, and dart a deadly fire from his eyes.

At that moment he looked like the old man.

For his brow, high and retreating, with the blood-clotted hair waving back from its outline, was awlorn in every vein, as though his soul shone from it ere she fled forever. Lips set, brows knit, hands firm—a circle of his men fighting around him he dashed into the Mexicans until his sword was wet, his arm weary.

At last, with his thigh splintered by a bullet, he gathered his proud form to its full height, and he fell.

THE CAUSES FOR ALARM AT THE SOUTH.

There is undoubtedly at the South many, who are honestly deceived as to the policy and intentions of the Republican party. They have been told, and really believe, that it is, its desire in some unlawful, and unconstitutional mode to interfere with the peculiar institution of that section of the country. Party leaders for sinister purposes have promulgated this idea, which will be soundly upon the inauguration of the new administration. When the old whigs of Georgia, Louisiana, Kentucky, North Carolina, and Tennessee are assured that the doctrines of the supporters of Lincoln, or Hamlin, are the same upon the question arising in relation to slavery as the doctrines of Clay and Webster, and that this new party is honestly striving to carry these doctrines to their legitimate results without interfering with the rights of any of the States, many of them will enlist under the Republican banner.

The free laborers at the South, the moment that they can feel free will at once speak out against that system which seeks to degrade them to the level of negro slaves. To these may be added another large and respectable class who believe slavery to be wrong and who will feel at liberty to openly condemn the evil; and we think that the day is not very distant when the Republican party, will be respectable in numbers in each of the Southern States.

When this party once obtains a foothold in the South, the justice of its principles will be more and more received and respected, new acquisitions will be made to its ranks, and in this way silently, but certainly it will carry on the "irrepressible conflict" without doing any injustice to any State or individual. The laws of right and justice operating not against the constitution but under it as it may be explained by the Supreme Court is the only rule by which the Republican party propose to administer the government. All know and feel that slavery at the South cannot be abolished but by the South. The leaders of the administration party well know this, yet, they seek to get up an alarm and to disturb the popular mind, but at some day, when the people understand the real facts of the case, they will do justice to their deceivers.

Treason in the Cabinet.

[From the Louisville (Ky.) Journal.]

Should Abraham Lincoln be chosen President by the people of the United States on the 6th day of November next, and should Yancey and his followers attempt to carry out their avowed and treasonable designs, it will become the duty of James Buchanan to order their arrest, and, in event of their conviction of treason, to sign the warrant for their execution. He has sworn to do this. Will he do it? We are not sure that he will do it. We are not sure that he will not do it. We are not sure that he will not connive at an attempt to lay this government in ruins. He is bad enough—he is bold enough? But, while we are not entirely sure as regards the President, we think we may be entirely sure, if reliance can be placed on credible testimony as to personal avowals, that one, at least, and perhaps two, of his constitutional advisers are conspirators, at this moment, against the perpetuity of this Union, and would lend all the power of the federal government, so far as in them lies, in furtherance of its destruction, should they be baffled in their selfish designs.

The Sentiments of a Southern Bel

We have frequently urged that the southern friends of Bell and Everett would, many of them, if they lived at the north, be found among the earnest supporters of Abraham Lincoln. In proof of this, we now cite the example of one of the most distinguished ornaments of the southern American party, the Hon. Emerson Etheridge, of Tennessee. On his return from Washington, he was the guest of the Hon. Richard W. Thompson, of Indiana, the acknowledged leader of the Bell and Everett party in that State, but who, unwilling to be sold out by the fusion movement, now supports the Republican ticket. A letter from Terre Haute says that while Mr. Etheridge was at Col. Thompson's he was serenaded by his political friends. The letter proceeds to say:

"He made a speech, and exhorted them to cast away all ideas of supporting a Bell ticket in Indiana, and give their united support to Lincoln. He advised that all the efforts of the united Opposition should be directed to the overthrow of the democratic party, which could only be done by defeating their candidates in as many States as possible. He said if he lived in Indiana he would vote for Lincoln; but as he lived in a State where his own ticket had a chance, he would vote for Bell. This advice from a man of the position held by Mr. Etheridge in his party has great weight with the members of that party in Indiana."

The advice of a man like Etheridge may well be acted upon by any conservative in Philadelphia. Mr. Etheridge lives among a cotton-growing people. He represents their interests in Congress. He has maintained his position through several successive sessions of Congress. And can it be that men are afraid to do here, in this free atmosphere, what he has the courage to do there!—Philadelphia North American.

Who will hold Office under Lincoln at the South?

It has been a favorite saying with some of our opponents, that if Lincoln should be elected the south would refuse to hold office under him. We have the best of evidence to show that this is baseless. Mr. Yancey, of Alabama, says:

"There are men in the Southern States who would take office under Lincoln, and they would, of course be the nearest to sympathizing with him in his rule. I tell you it would not take long for them to sympathize entirely with him—at least so entirely as to be able to keep the office."

The Knoxville, Tenn., Whig, a well known and influential organ of southern opinion, takes the following view of the case:

"Will democrats in the south, hold on? Who that knows them can doubt? Not one in a thousand will resign and go out of office. Oh no; they will be glad to serve under Lincoln and thus save the country. They will get up outside pressures, and procure letters to be written, urging the importance of continuing them in office. Postmasters, pension agents, District Attorneys, Marshals, route agents, and all, will intrigue and scheme, to be retained under even Lincoln. We challenge the world to point to a man who will resign. Lincoln's greatest trouble at the south will be to find offices enough to meet the clamorous demands of Breckinridge democrats."

The Washington Constitution, the organ of the Buchanan administration, also bears witness on the subject thus:

"If rumors are to be believed, it is not alone in Wheeling that mercenary politicians are shaping their sails to catch a favoring breeze from black Republican quarter. Such elements are so worthless, however, that the party which acquires them have no more cause of congratulation than the other for regret. They turn for the sake of office, but for interest they will turn again. Such men are worth barely their own votes, for they have no influence else. If the black Republican party can afford to reward such characters with office, to the exclusion of their own undoubtedly sincere partisans, they are stronger than we think they are."

This denunciation and abuse is extorted by the knowledge that the south is breaking loose from the control of the designing knaves who make merchandise of the Union. But it is hardly worth while to devote any further attention to the subject.

Mr. Lincoln, we have no doubt, is already deluged with applications for office from the south.

Mr. Lincoln's Conservatism.

It is sometimes urged by our opponents that Mr. Lincoln is nowhere represented as a conservative except in Pennsylvania, and particularly in Philadelphia. Fortunately the New York Journal of Commerce, in its extra zeal to injure our cause, furnishes us with proofs to the contrary by gathering up the following extracts for the purpose of making an argument against them:

A Washington correspondent of the Commercial Advertiser says:

"A report prevails that Mr. Lincoln will, soon after his election, cause it to be understood that he is not in favor of any aggression upon the constitutional rights of the south, and that as President he intends to regard and protect those rights. Some such representation of the views which he really entertains will tend to disarm southern hostility and quiet southern apprehensions."

The St. Louis Democrat, speaking of Mr. Lincoln, says:

"We venture to predict that his Administration will be a peaceful and fraternal one in every sense, unless—which heaven forbid—he should be called upon to put down rebellion and chastise traitors; and even in that dire event, we are sure he would exercise the sterner powers of his office more in sorrow than in anger."

The Cincinnati Gazette adopts this same kind of argument, as follows:

"No man in his senses believes for a moment that hostility to the south is a feature in our platform."

The Philadelphia City Journal asks, "where is the democratic key?" "We don't think there is any," says Prentiss. "Certainly the democracy since the Baltimore Convention have displayed nothing but a large bolt."

The Philadelphia City Journal asks, "where is the democratic key?" "We don't think there is any," says Prentiss. "Certainly the democracy since the Baltimore Convention have displayed nothing but a large bolt."

purpose or a particular section. It is the honest truth that Mr. Lincoln is really as much of a conservative statesman as any who I ever been presented for the suffrage of the people of the United States. This is fully borne out by the masterly enunciation of his views contained in the famous report of his Illinois debate with Douglas. We have already several times published at full length the evidence of this, and will now only refer our conservative readers to the report in question in proof of our position.—Philadelphia North American.

The Washington Constitution quotes articles from the Post, and another Douglas paper, and places this title over the collection: "Nero addled while Roma was burning."

California in 1856 gave Col. Fremont for President 20,691 votes out of 110,221. Her Republican vote was not materially increased at subsequent elections; the Republicans and anti-Leesompton Democrats being so intermingled in the two last that the distinct strength of either could not be determined.

Now, Mr. Rabe, the indefatigable secretary of her Republican State committee, writes that the canvassers already made by the Republican local committees, return 38,000 legal voters in that State ready to support the Lincoln electors; and that the number would be largely increased if the pony express should bring them good news from the October elections in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana. That news is by this time streaking through the gorges of the Rocky mountains, and will flash across the "gulches" and "canons" of the Golden State from six to twelve days prior to that of the presidential election. We trust that it will raise Mr. Lincoln's vote to at least 45,000, which will give him the State.

There are about 80,000 voters in California divided between the Breckinridge, Douglas and Bell parties; and the two former are so evenly matched that neither can poll 40,000 votes if Bell polls 5000. And, in carrying California, Mr. Lincoln secures the very last free State vote. Oregon is already safe.—N. Y. Tribune.

LATEST NEWS.

Fire in Salem Mass.—The Franklin Building, in Salem, owned by the Marine Society, was destroyed by fire Sunday morning. Loss about $50,000. Chief Engineer Wm. Chase, police officer Joseph Peterson, and Mr. George W. Estes were buried beneath the falling bricks as a portion of the wall fell. Mr. Chase had his right leg broken. Mr. Estes was injured internally, and Mr. Peterson was considerably bruised. It was with great difficulty that the unfortunate sufferers were extricated, and it was feared that the last named would have to be abandoned to the flames, but they were all saved, amid sympathizing cheers. In 1848, when the same building was on fire, Mr. Chase had his left leg broken, and it is a peculiar coincidence that then one of the same men helped carry him to the same room that he did on Sunday.

The Herald has at last discovered that it is useless to contend against destiny. New York is sure to go for the Rail-Splitter. She will vote for Lincoln, and if by a majority equal to the whole population of Kansas (100,000) it will not surprise us.

There is no genuine Justice between the Breckinridge and the Douglass factions. The breach has widened between them since these late elections.

This being true, and true it is every word of it, might we inquire what is the use of Bell men giving money to be employed in securing Mr. Bell's defeat in Maryland and Kentucky?—N. Y. Tribune.
